

1. Do you agree that local authorities should be under a duty to ensure that food and drinks which they provide in their schools, including nurseries, meet defined nutrient standards?

Yes No

Comment (add separately if required)

2. Where children are attending independent schools, and where the provision of food and drinks are arranged or funded, by a local authority, should the food and drinks meet defined nutrient standards?

Yes No

Comment (add separately if required)

3. Should local authorities be under a duty to promote uptake of school meals in their schools, including free school meals?

Yes No

Comment (add separately if required)

4. Should local authorities be under a duty to ensure that those taking free school meals can do so anonymously, as far as is practicable?

Yes No

Most definitely

See over.

Comment (add separately if required)

5. Should local authorities have the power to provide children in local authority schools with free drinks, fruit, vegetables, bread or cereal based snacks, which meet defined nutrient standards?

Yes No

See over

Comment (add separately if required)

6. Should there be a duty on Scottish Ministers and local authorities to endeavour to ensure that all local authority schools are health promoting schools?

Yes No

See over

Comment (add separately if required)

7. Any other comments? (add separately if required)

« Previous | Contents | Next »

4. I realise it is expensive but I believe a swipe card method of payment for school meals would help eliminate the difference between children / students paying for school meals and those entitled to free school meal. I feel the uptake in free meals would increase.

5. Surely this should be in place as a matter of course. For many children the fruit and vegetables etc are ^{part of} their main meal of the day. Many of them do not have a similar meal in the evening.

6. I thought every school in Scotland was a health promoting school. If they are not - they should be!

I think water should be available for the children at any time during the school day.