Dear Sir / Madam,

I have looked at the detail relating to proposals for altering the scale of penalties, time limits for compliance & requests for information, so as to bolster the enforcement regime in Scotland, and would only offer the following brief comment;

my instinct is that enforcement matters are progressed in a comprehensive & conscientious fashion in Scotland, but the main problem is that ' a culture of modesty ' almost precludes against this being conveyed (practice notes, Charters etc.) to the public.

I suspect that this is something, which might well be reflected on, internally.

Michael Dolan.

I have returned under separate cover ' a hard copy ' of the Respondee Information form.
