

Dear Sirs

I am contacting you regarding the consultation paper relating to the Scottish Climate Change Bill.

If the planet is to survive in any sort of recognizable form every nation must make significant reductions in the amount of greenhouse gases that they emit.

Scotland must play its part in this & an annual reduction of at least 3% aiming for an 80% reduction by 2050 has got to be achieved. In doing this however it is important to ensure that the natural environment suffers no further damage as a byproduct.

Scotland's wildlife is a huge asset to the country & it is our duty to minimize the effects of climate change on the natural world. Projects aimed at restoring our peat bogs & wetlands & expanding natural woodland would be hugely beneficial to wildlife & would help considerably in the battle against climate change.

I have no objection to my name & response being made public.

Yours faithfully

(John Chester)
