Q1. Does the NMP appropriately guide management of Scotland's marine resources?

I would be concerned about the impact of the emphasis on 'sustainable economic growth'.

Q2. Does the NMP appropriately set out the requirement for integration between marine planning and land use planning systems?

Comments

Q3. Does the NMP appropriately guide development of regional marine planning? What, if any, further guidance is required for regional marine planners in terms of implementation and how to interpret the NMP?

Comments

Q4. The Marine Regional Boundaries Consultation proposed that in addition to regional marine planning, further integrated management of key marine areas would be achieved by designating the Pentland Firth; the Minches and the mouth of the Clyde as Strategic Sea Areas.

Should the NMP set out specific marine planning policies for Strategic Sea Areas?

Comments

Q5. Are the objectives and policies in the NMP appropriate to ensure they further the achievement of sustainable development, including protection and, where appropriate, enhancement of the health of the sea?

Comments

Q6. Chapter 3 sets out strategic objectives for the National Marine Plan and Chapters 6 – 16 sets out sector specific marine objectives.

Is this the best approach to setting economic, social and marine ecosystem objectives and objectives relating to the mitigation of and, adaptation to climate change?

I'm concerned by the use of 'sustainable economic growth' and emphasis on it. Sustainable development is a more well defined, internationally recognised term that already incorporates economic considerations in combination with social and environmental issues. The definition of the term 'sustainable economic growth' is unclear.

Q7. Do you have any other comments on Chapters 1 – 3?

General Planning Policies

Q8. Are the general policies in Chapter 4 appropriate to ensure an approach of sustainable development and use of the marine area? Are there alternative policies that you think should be included? Are the policies on integration with other planning systems appropriate? A draft circular on the integration with terrestrial planning has also been published - would further guidance be useful?

Recreation and Tourism

Q26. Do you have any comments on Recreation and Tourism, Chapter 12?

This section should recognise open water swimming as a recreational activity. I take part regularly in open water sea swimming throughout the year, although particularly in summer, and would like to see the National Marine Plan recognise this activity in the list of recreational pursuits given both its increasing popularity in combination with benefits of the activity to participants, and the importance of safety issues. Open water swimming is an increasingly popular activity in Scotland and in the UK, both through informal groups and larger organised events. It is an activity with significant health benefits and potential for connecting people to their environment, and is accessible to a large group of people (with good access to coast) as it requires little equipment and is a free activity. The informal open water swimming groups in Edinburgh (the wild ones) and Fife (Wild West swimmers) are made up of hundreds of members who meet regularly. The Outdoor Swimming Society may be able to provide more detailed figures regarding participation.

Water quality, and transparent information about water quality is of paramount importance to open water swimmers who are vulnerable to poor water quality or fluctuations in water quality. Also, open water swimmers can be extremely vulnerable to other users such as speedboats and jet-skis, and given open water swimming can be under the radar of authorities, there is potential for significant safety issues here. Questions of priority and access can be unclear at times where there are conflicting uses, an issue experienced in the Portobello area of Edinburgh this year by swimmers who had safety concerns due to speedboats and jet skis close to shore. It transpired there was an exclusion zone but this was not being communicated or enforced by authorities. There was found to be low awareness of authorities of the existing exclusion zone (via a by law) and little knowledge of which authorities were responsible for dealing with concerns or complaints from water users. Whilst this is a local issue it highlights the importance for authorities to be aware of different types of recreational users, including swimmers, and their safety needs.
